One of her beautiful paintings, a portrait of Dallan Sanders, who was a former Head of Student Development at Eastern, hangs in the Casa del Sol on ENMU campus. Jill was a person who made friends and kept friends. She was born at the same time her sister Judy, Gay Su Pinnell, and several other close friends graduated from high school. We always called Jill and her other sister Jany our “little sisters.” She kept up with all of her friends from everywhere, especially friends she met at Eastern. Friendships were her joy. She was a devoted and loving wife to Paul, to her children, and her grandchildren. She never let go of fun and laughter. And it was a joy to be around her. This scholarship is in her honor.

Judy Vance attend ENMU as a student in art until she married her husband Don Crume and the two of them set off for the wide world. She was a dedicated wife and mother, but she continued to develop as an artist of many dimensions. She especially liked painting and answered the challenge of watercolor to create beautiful landscapes and portraits. Judy and Don lived in several different places and traveled widely, but when Don retired, they came back to Portales and lived again in her family's home. Judy's home reflected her wide respect for a wide range of art forms, including Western Bronze, antique pottery, and watercolors. One of her concerns was to nurture young people as artists. She shared her work with her own grandchildren, but she also volunteered her time as an Artist in Residence in schools in several places she lived. This scholarship is in her honor.

Mary Davis Hawks Scholarship in Piano

Mary Davis (Hawks) came to New Mexico from East Texas's "black dirt" farmland with her parents, brothers, and sister at the height of the Great Depression. After attending ENMU and gaining a degree in science and pre-med while supporting herself and her son on a nursing job at the Roosevelt County Hospital, she graduated with honors. Mary later took an English teaching position at Portales High School. After finishing her Master's thesis on how to write a thesis, she began teaching English at PHS and occasionally substituting for the science teachers when they could not work. When her son Donald was in second grade, she bought a piano and provided lessons hoping he would show as much talent with music as her deceased husband. Unfortunately, that was not the case. However, Commander Donald Hawks, USN RET, gained a BS in management economics from Cal Berkeley and added a MA in business to enable a consulting career. CDR Hawks now wishes to honor his mother's hard work, teaching career, and care for people living with cancer in Portales. He now honors his mother's inspiration to us all with a Scholarship in Piano.

An avid outdoor sportsman, he loved hunting, fishing, and backpacking into the high country. He also enjoyed photography. He was the first mayor of Lovington, New Mexico, when it changed from a village government to a city government structure. Mr. Wright loved this part of the country and often said, "You may travel this world over but never will you find a sunset as beautiful as you will on the plains of the Llano Estacado. The sunsets are just as beautiful as the people who live in this area."
